

- Learning and Education

A personal learning has to happen through all our life. Only then, we are able to work for others and ourselves competently and courageously. Our own development and our own engagement are two important facets of our personality, which are mutually connected. Whoever wants to discover and develop personal talents needs an encounter with other people. Moreover, if you want to engage yourself for the benefit of others, you need confidence in your own abilities. Protestant education is – from this point of view - the task for us to support people in their personal development, to foster their individual competencies, and at the same time to help them in developing their abilities. These abilities remain as charisms which are the gifts given by God that can and will inspire us to new steps into a greater life.
